specification describes a method for designing a synthetic polynuclectide. The method comprises providing a starting polynuclectide, determining the predicted free energy of folding per base of the polynucleotide, modifying the polynucleotide by replacing a codon with a different codon to provide a modified polynucleotide, determining free energy of folding per base of the modified polynucleotides, and comparing this with that of the original polynucleotides. The method is sectual for developing nucleic acid sequences that enhance expression of the encoded protein in a heterologous host. The design and preparation of the synthetic genes are used in application of gene shuffling, directed evolution and solecular incoding methods. The method allows expression of genes from various organizations such as mammals, plants, years, traid and tactoria in probabilities such as mammals, plants, years, traid and tactoria in probabilities, such as Estherichia deligned to the control of the control of the synthetic bosts, and as Estherichia deligned to the control of the control of the synthetic bosts at community to bosts. The present sequence represents a galactose exiduse enzyme, polynocleotide was modified using using the method of the in proteins with low yield such as methionine gamma-lyase from P. putida. invention.
